RESILIENCE THROUGH RELATIONSHIPS:
Celebrating Therapeutic Child Care Practice in the 21st Century

After a year away due to the pandemic, Wrexham Glyndŵr University and The Consortium for Therapeutic Communities are delighted to confirm the return of the Therapeutic Child Care Conference – online this year as we all get back to some form of normality!

This year’s event is focusing on a celebration – of all your work and all your achievements, especially over the last 18 months. Therapeutic child care and the focus on the deliberate use of relationships have proved to be highly resilient services throughout the pandemic.

We want to provide a moment of pause, reflection and celebration of the power of relationships to build resilience, in children, in staff, in services, in communities.

The conference will appeal to all working to teach, care for and support young people, especially those with emotional, social and additional learning needs. We know that increasingly practitioners are facing the challenges of supporting the well-being of pupils and managing the impact on the whole child of a range of adverse childhood experiences.

We intend to provide the ideal opportunity to come together with other professionals and practitioners to participate in small groups and debate with speakers and presenters, whilst enjoying a celebration of achievements.

We will have the benefit of active contributions of young people and those with lived experience on the day.
